

What is the best essay writing service in UK?

According to an expert in “contract cheating” (contract cheating), a student writing business is flourishing due to rising tuition fees and an increase in the number of international students. Leading essay writing services that perform their written work for students report that, thanks to a steady increase in demand, their profits have increased annually by 10% in the last decade.

These companies have long been accused of encouraging cheating by their way of making money, but according to them, they immediately openly declare to students that such ready-made essays are forbidden to pass off as their own work, and should be used only as a model. Dr. Thomas Lancaster, a lecturer at Coventry University, has studied essay writing services for ten years and created the term “contract cheating” to mean a situation where students buy works and pass them off as their own.

According to him, since the tuition fees increased in 2012, the “cost of failure” has become much higher, therefore, an increasing number of students are “willing to take risks” and ask for help in the service of finished essays. “This is a very prosperous business,” he adds. “There are already many available sources, and their number is constantly increasing. I’m not only talking about websites besides them, there’s plenty of offline resources: advertising in newspapers, on universities, on special bulletin boards.” Daniel Dennehy, client experience manager for one of the leading companies in the UK for ready-made writings, believes that a sharp increase in the number of students from other countries stimulates this business.

The number of international students in the United Kingdom increased from 318,000 in the 2004/05 school year to 436,585 in the 2014/15. Many of them seek help in the service of ready-made essays, because they have problems understanding the lectures, Dennehy said Truly the Best Essay Writing Service in the UK
